

'Bite-sized concerts' for Music Studies students

The Department of Music Studies fosters the independent artistic development of its students and promotes their work throughout the University community. One of its initiatives has been that of encouraging its students to form variable ensembles to perform and record short pieces of their choice, particularly their own compositions.

The Department promotes these recordings as 'bite-sized concerts' through Newspoint and the Department's Facebook page, in order to give more visibility to young musicians within the university, and beyond.
